Bleak Terror Report Released

Assessment calls Iraq war a 'cause celebre' for extremists

WASHINGTON | The war in Iraq has become a "cause celebre" for Islamic extremists, breeding deep resentment of the U.S. that probably will get worse before it gets better, federal intelligence analysts conclude in a report at odds with President Bush's contention of a world that's growing safer.

In the bleak report, declassified and released Tuesday on Bush's orders, the nation's most veteran analysts conclude that despite serious damage to the leadership of al-Qaeda, the threat from Islamic extremists has spread both in numbers and in geographic reach.

Bush and his advisers have said the assessment of global terrorism supported their arguments that the world is safer because of the war. But more than three pages of stark judgments warning about the spread of terrorism contrasted with the administration's glass-half-full declarations.

"If this trend continues, threats to U.S. interests at home and abroad will become more diverse, leading to increasing attacks worldwide," according to the document.

Bush said critics who believe the Iraq war has worsened terrorism are naive and mistaken.

"To suggest that if we weren't in Iraq we would see a rosier scenario, with fewer extremists joining the radical movement, requires us to ignore 20 years of experience," he said. KATHERINE SHRADER (AP)

CARJACKING | Flat Burglars Four men on Monday tried to carjack a Southfield, Mich., woman who was waiting for a tow truck, WDIV-TV reported. The woman's car had a flat tire and she was waiting for the truck when the men approached and took her car. However, the flat tire prevented them from getting far, and not long after driving off, they got out of the vehicle and escaped in another vehicle. Police pursued them until the suspects crashed their car; all four men were arrested. (EXPRESS) EyeOpeners | Page 2

LEGISLATING

Wait, That's Not How a Bill Becomes Law

Holyrod, Scotland, engineers Monday fixed a glitch that put pornography on the Scottish Parliament's television systems, the Scotsman reported. Graphic advertising for adult channels, including Red Hot Wives, Playboy TV and Spice Extreme, aired on 320 televisions at the Parliament building this weekend. The channels were inaccurately listed as accessible options, though the TVs are meant to show parliamentary debates and committee meetings. The system was shut down Sunday to prevent pornography from airing; the channels had been added to the feed by the cable television supplier. (EXPRESS)

A German business will tell customers' spouses or lovers that their partners are breaking up with them, the BBC reported. The "separation agency" will deliver the news of the breakup for $25 over the phone or $63 in person. "If you want to have a new partnership, then you have to quit your previous one. ... It's the same market—just in reverse," founder Bernd Dressler said. Sympathetically and directly, the agency informs the partner of three reasons the breakup is occurring, then tells them their client does not desire further contact with them. "They want to end it in a neutral way," Dressler said. (EXPRESS)

Actually, we're not sure he even can blink while pulling off this stunt — tugging a 1.5-ton car for 32.8 feet by using ropes hooked on his lower eyelids Tuesday. Dong has performed similar stunts around the country since 1991 with the help of Qigong, a system of deep-breathing exercises, he said. How breathing exercises prevent your eyelids from being ripped off wasn't explained. (EXPRESS)

Congress Unlikely to Pass Spy Bill

Surveillance measure stalls; bill on detainees heads toward a vote

WASHINGTON | Half of President Bush's antiterrorism legislative agenda stalled Tuesday when discord among Republicans forced GOP leaders to give up on trying to legalize his warrantless wiretapping program before the Nov. 7 election.

Republican lawmakers instead turned their attention to the other half — establishing a legal framework for detaining, interrogating and trying terrorism suspects before military commissions. The House and the Senate were set to consider the detainee bill on Wednesday.

Bush kept up his call for Congress to pass both measures.

The House was scheduled to act Wednesday on a bill defining terrorism suspects' legal rights; Senate action was expected later this week.

Republicans on Capitol Hill made clear that Congress is likely to grant only half of Bush's request by week's end, when lawmakers leave town to defend their House and Senate majorities leading up to the elections.

Vast differences between House and Senate versions of the wiretapping bill cannot be bridged before week's end, two GOP leadership aides said on condition of anonymity because the decision had not yet been announced.

The detainees bill would establish a court system to prosecute terrorism suspects. The Supreme Court ruled in June that only Congress could do that.

A terrorist being held at Guantanamo Bay prison in Cuba could be tried by "military commission" as long as he is afforded the ability to review evidence against him and have access to defense counsel. The bill also sets legal bounds on how the CIA interrogates terrorism suspects.

Democrats were expected to side with Sen. Arlen Specter on his effort to reinstate the right of detainees to appeal their detentions in court.

White House Alleged To Bar Storm Report

Review reported to link warming with an increase in hurricanes

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration has blocked release of a report that suggests global warming is contributing to the frequency and strength of hurricanes, the journal Nature reported Tuesday.

The possibility that warming conditions may cause storms to become stronger has generated debate among climate and weather experts, particularly in the wake of the Hurricane Katrina disaster.

In the new case, Nature said weather experts at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration — part of the Commerce Department — in February set up a seven-member panel to prepare a consensus report on global warming and hurricanes.

According to Nature, a draft of the statement said that warming may be having an effect. In May, when the report was expected to be released, panel chair Ants Leetmaa received an e-mail from a Commerce official saying the report needed to be made less technical and was not to be released.

Leetmaa did not immediately respond to calls seeking comment. RANDOLPH E. SCHMID (AP)

Traffickers Plead Guilty

Colombian cartel said

percent of U.S. cocaine

MIAMI | In what the government called "the final, fatal blow" to the world's biggest cocaine supplier, two Colombian brothers who helped found the infamous Cali cartel pleaded guilty Tuesday to drug trafficking, agreed to forfeit billions in tainted assets, and received what could amount to a life sentence.

Gilberto and Miguel Rodriguez Orejuela, ages 67 and 63, were each sentenced to 30 years in prison. They were the highest-ranking of more than 300 drug traffickers extradited to this country since the United States and Colombia signed a new treaty in 1997.

The brothers also struck a deal with prosecutors to protect six of their relatives in Colombia from prosecution on obstruction and money laundering charges. Twenty-eight family members will be permitted to keep some assets not tainted by drug money and could be removed from a Treasury Department list.

The Cali cartel, once responsible for as much as 80 percent of the cocaine brought into the United States, was known for its ingenious smuggling methods.

Clinton Fox Interview Spurs Political Fallout

Ex-president's angry response to bin Laden challenge riles parties

ALBANY, N.Y. | Former President Clinton's angry response to questions about Osama bin Laden has partisans of every persuasion certain it will energize voters in the elections and affect a possible presidential bid by his wife.

Clinton

Conservatives immediately labeled the interview a prime example of the soap opera that would run daily should another Democrat - say, for example, New York Sen. Hillary Rodham Clinton - win the White House.

Not so, countered Democrats. They argued the former president's feisty dressing-down of Fox News'

Chris Wallace is just the wake-up call the party's liberal base needed six weeks before the election, a pointed criticism of the Bush administration's bungled search for bin Laden.

Either way, don't expect the furor to subside anytime soon.

In the exchange with Wallace, the former president contended that, unlike him, the newly installed Bush administration ignored bin Laden until the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice challenged Clinton's claim that he did more than many of his conservative critics to pursue bin Laden and accused the former president of leaving no comprehensive plan to fight al-Qaeda.

On the Democratic side, party chairman Howard Dean praised Clinton for taking on "the right-wing propaganda machine."

Supreme Court To Hear Case On Union Fees

WASHINGTON | The Supreme Court agreed Tuesday to decide whether public employee unions must get special permission to spend some workers' dues on political causes, a case testing limits on labor activism just before the 2008 presidential campaign.

The justices accepted an appeal from the state of Washington that involves fees paid to the Washington Education Association by teachers who declined to join the union. Those workers still can be charged dues by the union to help pay for labor negotiations that affect them. But they can't be forced to pay for the union's political activism, under a string of Supreme Court rulings that reach back nearly 30 years.

At issue is whether the union needs teachers to say "yes" before the fees can be used for political causes or whether teachers must specifically object to having a portion spent for that purpose. (AP)

SKEPTICS AT THE PUMP: Energy experts pin the recent decline in gasoline prices on basic market forces, but two out of five Americans believe the November elections and politics — not economics — are behind the plunge at the pump.

Air Passengers Adjust to New Rules

Travelers embrace the eased restrictions on liquids, gels in luggage

ATLANTA | Happy that new security rules have cleared their liquids and gels for takeoff, air travelers presented small, clear plastic bags filled with toiletries for inspection Tuesday, but long lines grew at some airports as others confused about the changes filled trash cans with containers that were too large.

Most toiletries can be in containers no larger than 3 ounces, and they must be zipped up in plastic bags that are quart-sized or smaller.

A TSA inspector searches a passenger's toiletries at Logan Airport in Boston.

Those limits threw off passengers who scrambled at security checkpoints to toss out bottles of shaving cream and hand lotion or to find the proper plastic bags.

Trash bins outside airport security checkpoints filled up with forbidden items, though not as much as they did last month when a broader ban was put in place. Many travelers were grateful for the relaxed rules, which allow them to carry drinks, makeup and other items on board their flights.

The new rules, announced Monday by the federal Transportation Security Administration, allow travel-sized toiletries to be carried aboard flights in sealable clear plastic bags. Some items are permitted in any amount: saline solution, eye drops and prescription and nonprescription medicine, said TSA spokesman Christopher White.

Drinks, liquids and gels purchased in airport stores inside security checkpoints can be carried into passenger cabins. Baby formula is allowed but must be inspected.

The rules replace an outright ban on liquids, lotions and gels ordered Aug. 10 after an alleged plot to bomb U.S.-bound jetliners was foiled.

TSA chief Kip Hawley said the stricter ban is no longer needed, and that he was pleased Tuesday's transition to the new rules went as smoothly as it did. DANIEL YEE (AP)

2 Miners Commit Suicide During Blast Investigation

Both workers had been questioned in probe of accident at Sago site

MORGANTOWN, W.VA. | Two miners whose jobs included watching for safety hazards inside the Sago Mine before the deadly explosion last January committed suicide in the past month.

Neither man had been blamed for the disaster that killed 12 of their comrades, and neither one's family has definitively linked the suicides to the accident.

Both men were working at the Sago Mine on the day of the blast and had been questioned by investigators along with dozens of other witnesses. One former co-worker said at least one of the men felt investigators were treating him as if he had done something wrong.

John Nelson Boni, whose job that day was to maintain water pumps, shot himself Saturday, police said.

William Lee "Flea" Chisolm, the 47-year-old dispatcher responsible for monitoring carbon monoxide alarms and communicating with crews underground that morning, shot himself at his Belington home Aug. 29, police said. (AP)

Insurance Rises to Twice Inflation Rate

WASHINGTON | Workers won't find much comfort in the smallest increase in health insurance premiums since 1999.

The 7.7 percent increase this year was still more than twice the rate of inflation.

"To working people and business owners, a reduction in an already very high rate of increase just means you're still paying more," said Dr. Drew Altman, president of the Kaiser Family Foundation, a health care research organization that annually tracks the cost of health insurance. (AP)

Review Turns Up Problems at Site Of Big Dig Crash

BOSTON | A city transportation review prompted by a deadly collapse in a Big Dig tunnel has found cracks that will require major repairs to an older tunnel under Boston Harbor, Gov. Mitt Romney said Tuesday.

The Summer Tunnel does not need to be closed immediately, but the governor said there eventually could have been "a real safety failure" if the problems had gone unchecked.

The tunnel opened in 1934 but had a major overhaul in the 1990s. Needed repairs will require lane closures, at the very least. (AP)

Blair Asserts U.S. Alliance Is Crucial

In final speech to Labour Party, PM says ties key to terror fight

MANCHESTER, ENGLAND | Prime Minister Tony Blair, in his final address to his governing Labour Party, said Tuesday that being the United States' strongest ally can be difficult but it is crucial to stay close to Washington in the fight against terrorism.

"Yes, it's hard sometimes to be America's strongest ally," he said. "At the moment, I know people only see the price of these alliances. Give them up and the cost in terms of power, weight and influence for Britain would be infinitely greater. Distance this country, and you may find it's a long way back."

This speech — his last to the Labour Party faithful as leader — was a chance to secure his legacy and to urge his party to stay on course when he leaves office sometime in the next year.

As leader, Blair forced the traditionally left-leaning party into the center and reached out to moderate, middle-class voters. His plat-

He was re-elected in 2001. But this was the term that Blair faced severe opposition when Britain joined the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq in 2003.

"We used to feel we could shut our front doors on the problems and conflicts of the wider world. Not anymore," Blair said. "The British people today are reluctant global citizens. We have to make them confident ones." JENNIFER QUINN (AP)

STATE OF UNREST: An Iraqi man views a vehicle damaged when a car bomb exploded near a police patrol in Baghdad Tuesday.

More Sectarian Attacks Hit Baghdad

Amid fresh violence, judge decides to delay stormy Saddam trial

BAGHDAD, IRAQ | Gunmen assaulted two Sunni mosques and sprayed bullets into Sunni homes in a mixed neighborhood Tuesday in sectarian violence that killed three people and wounded 15.

Police in Baghdad also found the bodies of 23 men apparently slain by the sectarian death squads terrorizing the capital.

Underscoring Iraq's divisions, more cracks appeared in a Sunni

Arab agreement to support legislation that Shiites hope will lead to a self-ruled Shiite state in southern Iraq. Many Sunnis fear that would splinter Iraq and deny their minority a share of its oil wealth.

The attacks on Sunni targets began when the al-Ashra al-Mushara mosque in al-Amel district was stormed by gunmen in black uniforms, which are often associated with the Mahdi Army militia loyal to anti-U.S. Shiite cleric Muqtada al-Sadr.

Meanwhile, Saddam Hussein's genocide trial adjourned for two weeks Tuesday after a stormy ses-

18 Killed In Afghan Bombing

Suicide blast strikes outside provincial governor's compound

LASHKAR GAH, AFGHANISTAN | A Taliban suicide bomber killed 18 people outside a provincial governor's compound Tuesday, including several Muslim pilgrims set to travel to Mecca — another in a series of attacks directed at senior figures in President Hamid Karzai's U.S.-backed government.

The blast at the doorstep of Helmand Gov. Mohammed Daoud Safi's compound came on the same day a bombing against a NATO patrol in the Kabul area killed an Italian soldier and a child, and two weeks after militants assassinated a governor in eastern Afghanistan. Safi was inside the compound, but was not injured.

Afghan soldiers stopped the bomber at the compound's security gate, where he detonated his explosives, said the governor's spokesman, Ghulam Muhiddin.

Nine Afghan soldiers and nine civilians were killed, said Rahmatullah Mohammadi, director of the hospital in Lashkar Gah. Seventeen people were wounded, he said. ABDUL KHALEQ (AP)

Newly elected Japanese Prime Minister Shinzo Abe receives applause from lawmakers in Tokyo on Tuesday as he is officially elected as the country's leader.

Abe Elected New Japanese Leader

Easy win in parliament vote for successor to outgoing PM Koizumi

TOKYO | Japan's new nationalist prime minister, Shinzo Abe, pledged to repair tattered relations with China, bolster his country's long-standing alliance with the U.S. and overhaul the pacifist constitution after cruising to an easy victory Tuesday in a parliamentary vote.

Abe's road map takes Japan down a path toward a more robust military and more assertive foreign policy, delineating a fresh direction for a leader who, at 52, is Japan's youngest premier.

While Abe envisions a confident Japan that can step from the shadow of decades of postwar guilt, he conceded the country's foreign and security policy will still rest firmly on Tokyo's half-century alliance with the United States.

"It is necessary to buttress mutual trust and strengthen bilateral relations," Abe said in his first news conference after being elected by parliament to succeed Junichiro Koizumi as prime minister.

Key to Abe's push will be revising the constitution, which renounces war as a means of solving international disputes and has formed the cornerstone of Japan's post-World War II identity.

Conservatives want the constitution overhauled to give Japan's military greater leeway in contributing to international peacekeeping operations.

Off to a fast start in setting up his Cabinet, Abe stocked the new government with conservatives on every issue from the economy to foreign affairs. HANS GREIMEL (AP)

U.N. Role Weighed For Darfur

Discussions progress on deploying military advisers for A.U. force

KHARTOUM, SUDAN | The United Nations and Sudan are discussing the deployment of U.N. military advisers to reinforce the African Union peacekeeping mission in Darfur, hoping to avert a standoff that could deepen the crisis in the war-torn region, officials from both sides said Tuesday.

The proposal appeared to be gaining momentum amid fears violence could escalate. The United Nations has demanded Sudan accept a U.N. peacekeeping force in the region, but Sudan has fiercely opposed it.

The Sudanese government's top official on Darfur, Majzoub al-Khalifa, said in an interview that Sudan was willing to accept a compromise involving U.N. advisers, first raised in public last week during the U.N. General Assembly.

Bahaa Elkoussy, a U.N. spokesman in Sudan, said the two sides were negotiating over sending U.N. advisers "to facilitate the deployment of the A.U." (AP)

Ex-Enron CFO Sentenced

Judge sends Fastow to prison for six years for role in corporate fraud

HOUSTON | Andrew Fastow, the mastermind behind financial schemes that doomed Enron Corp., was sentenced Tuesday to six years in prison by a judge who felt he deserved a more lenient term than the decade he had agreed to accept in a plea bargain.

Fastow, the former chief financial officer who cooperated with prosecutors in other cases related to Enron's 2001 implosion, had agreed to serve a maximum 10-year term when he pleaded guilty in 2004.

But the judge said he deserved a lighter sentence because Fastow has been persecuted after Enron's

failure and because his family has suffered enough. Fastow's wife already has served a year for her role in the scandal.

"Prosecution is necessary, but persecution was not," said U.S. District Judge Kenneth Hoyt. "These factors call for mercy."

Fastow was taken immediately into custody after the judge rejected his request to turn himself in later. The judge did allow him to hug his wife, who was seated in the front row of the packed courtroom. They embraced for several seconds before he was taken away in handcuffs.

"I know I deserve punishment," said Fastow, who cried before the sentencing while telling the court he was sorry for what he had done. "I accept it without bitterness."

Fastow must serve all six years because there is no parole in the federal system. He also was sentenced to two years of probation after his release from prison. (AP)

Ebbers Begins 25-Year Prison Term

OAKDALE, LA. | Former WorldCom chief Bernard Ebbers drove through the gates of a federal prison Tuesday to begin a 25-year sentence for his role in the $11 billion accounting fraud that toppled the company he built from a tiny telecommunications firm to an industry giant.

Behind the wheel of a Mercedes he had driven from Mississippi, Ebbers pulled the bill of his cap down, shielding his face from reporters and photographers, as he drove into the prison.

Ebbers, a former high school basketball coach, was sentenced in July of last year after he was convicted of fraud and conspiracy in the massive fraud that drove Clinton, Miss.-based WorldCom into bankruptcy in 2002.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Ebbers' conviction and sentence last month.

Investigators uncovered $11 billion in fraud at WorldCom Inc., much of it because accountants were classifying regular expenses as long-term capital expenditures. (AP)

Homeland Security Secretary Michael Chertoff, right, speaks with District officials at the introduction of the Unified Communications Center on Tuesday in Washington.

Officials Unveil Center For Crisis Coordination

Fully equipped facility to serve as command post for emergencies

WASHINGTON | District, regional and federal officials Tuesday introduced a state-of-the-art communications center that will serve as command post in a regional emergency.

The 127,000-square-foot center, five miles east of the Capitol, could be used to coordinate rescue and recovery operations, mass evacuations or other response efforts.

"This is the perfect facility to handle regional communications if we have another sniper attack," E. Michael LaTessa, the director of the D.C. Office of Unified Communications, said Tuesday.

During the 2002 sniper shootings and in the aftermath of the Sept. 11, 2001, attack, police, fire and emergency personnel from different communities that responded were unable to communicate easily because they used different radio frequencies.

The center also will serve as the communications hub for underground emergency operations in the Metrorail system, which could involve personnel from several jurisdictions. It also eventually will be able to share wireless audio, video and text data with operations control centers in Maryland, Virginia and other nearby states.

The United Communications Center takes thousands of emergency and nonemergency calls each day. Since operators and dispatchers began work Sept. 22, nearly 99 percent of more than 16,500 calls have been answered in less than a second, LaTessa said. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

Capitol Security Probe Requested

WASHINGTON | Capitol Police Chief Christopher McGaffin has asked an inspector general to open an independent probe into why an armed man was able to enter and run through the building, lawmakers said Tuesday.

Some House members are questioning McGaffin's veracity concerning his initial account of the incident.

On Sept. 18, the day that Carlos Greene, 20, is accused of storming the Capitol, McGaffin said his officers subdued the man. Later, a police spokeswoman confirmed that civilians caught Greene.

"Of course he knew," said Rep. Ray LaHood, R-Ill., emerging from a closed meeting Tuesday, referring to McGaffin. "He knew the moment it happened." LAURIE KELLMAN (AP)

MS-13 Gang Trial Begins

Two men alleged to be members face racketeering charges

GREENBELT, MD. | Two men accused of belonging to the violent street gang MS-13 went on trial Tuesday in U.S. District Court on federal racketeering charges, as prosecutors claimed the Hispanic group more resembles a murderous criminal syndicate than a loose collection of street toughs.

The case against the men, the first of 22 indicted on federal charges to go to trial, marks the latest attempt by federal authorities to use a broad law usually reserved for organized crime to stanch the growing violence attributed to MS-13 in the Washington region.

Under the Racketeer Influenced and Corrupt Organizations Act, or RICO, prosecutors can present evidence against Edgar "Pony" Ayala, 28, and Oscar "Casper" Ramos Velasquez, 21, on the murders, kidnappings, rapes and other acts allegedly carried out by the gang even though the pair are not charged with the individual crimes.

Instead, prosecutors must prove Ayala and Velasquez were active members of MS-13, or Mara Salvatrucha, and the gang had a clear organizational structure with a common goal of committing crimes.

"You will have no doubt this is an organized group," Assistant U.S. Attorney Sandra Wilkinson told jurors. STEPHEN MANNING (AP)

African Americans & High Blood Pressure

A focus on health in your community

African Americans, more than any other race or ethnic group, have a greater risk of developing high blood pressure. Not only is it more common, it occurs at a younger age and can lead to severe heart failure, stroke, and kidney problems.

Local physicians are conducting a research study of the investigational use of two approved medications, compared to a single approved medication, in their ability to lower high blood pressure. Members of the African American and Black communities with known or suspected high blood pressure may qualify to participate. All study-related care is provided and compensation for time and travel may be available.

BMW M6 Ain't No Pushover

It's not best for your daily driving, but has grace under pressure

ROAD TEST | The problem is not with the BMW M6. The problem is the world around it. It's just too small. No off-ramp is long enough, no highway straight enough, no parking lot so empty as to wring out half this car's scale-pegging potential. The M6 requires a much larger planet, and we, alas, are out of those.

The M division is, of course, in the business of full-clip overkill, making fast cars quite a bit and unnecessarily faster, so it's not really a surprise that the M6 capacities are so thoroughly rank and audacious. The trouble is that, to enjoy the M6, you have to flog it like you're Captain Bligh in mid-mood swing. There is perhaps no modern car more allergic to gentle-throttle, stop-and-go driving than the M6.

The key issue is what BMW drolly refers to as the transmission: the seven-speed sequential manual gearbox (SMG). These devices are intended to strike a compromise between an automatic tranny that tends to sap torque and the crisp, authoritative, driver-involved manual gearbox operated with a shifter and clutch. Lots of cars have these race-derived, paddle-shifter gearboxes. None is quite so balky, reluctant and aggravating as the SMG.

If you push the M6's beautiful center-console shifter into "D" for

The 2007 BMW M6 is like that smart kid in class who used to be too lazy to put effort into his/her homework, then would completely ace each of the hardest tests.

Drive, all is well until you come to the automated first-second shift; then the computer disengages the gear, the throttle goes down to idle, the digital clutch considers its options a moment before re-engaging in second gear and ordering the throttle back into action. This process takes, approximately, an eternity, and when the gear re-engages, the car lurches like it's sucked up a bit of bad gas. There is, in fact, a scalar controller on the console with which you can adjust the aggressiveness of the gearshift, but there is no way to smooth out these gear transitions except by feathering the throttle yourself. Otherwise, the car is constantly hitching and falling off throttle, gathering itself back up and surging. Life as an automotive yo-yo — though DIYers can change gears manually either by the gated shifter or the paddle shifters.

The one way you can enjoy this car is if you forget about the automatic mode and use the paddle shifters behind the steering column, as God and Hans Stuck intended. Even then, gear changes at routine speeds are scandalously clunky.

All the M6's orneriness gradually dissipates, then disappears the harder you drive the car. Push the "Power" button — this changes the engine mapping and other functions — and depress the M button, which puts a sports spiff on both throttle and steering behavior. Dial in the adjustable suspension to its stiffest setting and go to work.

Suddenly, the computer logic all comes into focus. Now the car starts to feel its own pulse — honestly, the sensation is of riding a fast horse just as it breaks from an awkward canter to gallop. The upshifts begin to blend together in one seamless, elastic yank of acceleration; the throttle-blipping downshifts, coming bang-bang-bang under hard braking, are just about perfect. Drive it like you stole it, and the M6 is sensational, the mortal sin of transportation.

Much the same applies for the suspension. Rigged with strut-based front suspension and four-links in the rear, the car has a pretty stiff ride. DAN NEIL (THE LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Automotive expert PAT GOSS owns Pat Goss Car World Inc., a local car repair company. He chats monthly on washingtonpost.com/cars.

My car's air conditioner works well for about half an hour, then barely puts out any cold air. I have to wait a few hours with the car off before it works again. Any thoughts about what could cause this and what it would cost to fix it?

Check for the proper refrigerant level, and, if it's OK, check the pressure switch(es), as the system is most likely freezing.

I bought an old, high-mileage used car last week. It has a 30-day full warranty. Yesterday, the engine blew, so the guy is going to put in another engine. Can I expect anything good from this, or should I try to get my money back?

If the engine they buy is good and they do a proper installation, it will be OK. But it sounds like this car was in bad shape from the beginning, and you may have other disasters waiting to happen. I'd try to get my money back.

I'm having trouble with my car stalling, particularly when slowing to a stop. I have had a garage look at it, trying to up the idle with no luck.

Tell your shop to quit trying to up the idle. Check for dirt and sludge in the air filter and in the fuel distributor.

Redskins Take Baby Steps on 'D'

Struggling unit looks improved against a shaky Texans offense

REDSKINS | During the first two weeks of the season, the Redskins' defense looked soft.

The offense, which added big names such as Antwaan Randle El, Brandon Lloyd and Al Saunders during the offseason, took the brunt of the criticism, but the defensive unit had been ripped apart by Minnesota quarterback Brad Johnson and Dallas QB Drew Bledsoe to the tune of 678 yards over two games.

Needless to say, it didn't look like the Gregg Williams defense fans in Washington had become accustomed to over the last two seasons — the defense that carried the team into the playoffs last year and pushed them through the first round even though the offense managed a mere 120 yards and nine first downs in that game.

But the Texans seemed to hold the answers to all of the Redskins' looming questions. Against a team still looking for a running game behind a spotty offensive line, the Washington defense tightened up. Houston finished with 261 total yards of offense and just 61 rush yards.

STRIPPER: Redskins linebacker Marcus Washington reaches in on Texans quarterback David Carr and forces a fumble in last Sunday's 31-15 win at Houston.

"We played physical and we hustled," coach Joe Gibbs said about his team's defensive effort. "We did not give up any explosion runs. We set the tempo in the second half with a three-and-out, which is a big deal. We struggled some in that area in the first two games."

There were still plenty of negatives. On their first drive of the game, the Texans drove 66 yards and took an early 7-0 lead to the chorus of groans coming from the nation's capital.

That touchdown was set up by what Gibbs describes as an "explosion play" — a 53-yard bomb to Andre Johnson.

There was also a 32-yard pass interference penalty on Carlos Rogers that set up the Texans' other touchdown. And the front four finished with just one sack against a line that had given up nine in the first two games.

The test will come this week, when the Redskins host the defensive-oriented Jaguars. And then again in the following weeks.

In addition to facing Dallas again and the always-dangerous Colts at Indianapolis, the Redskins still have four games remaining against the Eagles and Giants — currently, the two best offenses in the league.

Golfing legend Byron Nelson, 94, died of natural causes at his home on Tuesday.

Golf 'Lord' Nelson Dies at 94

Legend won a record 11 straight tournaments in historic 1945 season

GOLF | Byron Nelson, golf's courtly "Lord Byron" whose 11 straight tournament victories in 1945 stand as one of sports' most enduring records, died Tuesday. He was 94.

The Tarrant County Medical Examiner's Office said he died of natural causes.

Known for his graceful swing and gentle manner, Nelson had the greatest year in the history of professional golf in 1945 when he won 18 tournaments. He captured 31 of 54 tournaments in 1944-45. Then, at age 34, he retired after the 1946 season to spend more time on his Texas ranch.

Arnold Palmer called Nelson "one of the greatest players who ever lived."

He won the Masters in 1937 and '42, the U.S. Open in 1939 and the PGA Championship in 1940 and '45.

"I don't know very much," Nelson said in a 1997 interview with The Associated Press. "I know a little bit about golf. I know how to make a stew. And I know how to be a decent man." JAIME ARON (AP)

Train Derailment Causes No Injuries

Nats charter goes off the track during trip back from New York

NATIONALS | A chartered train carrying the Washington Nationals back from their series in New York derailed early Tuesday morning, injuring no one but causing a significant delay in the team's travels.

According to Amtrak, the train derailed around 1:30 a.m. near Wilmington, Del., when the locomotive's rear wheels went off the track.

The team was transferred to an Acela just after 3 a.m., Connell said. She said Amtrak officials did not yet know what had caused the derailment, which was causing 10- to 15-minute delays on travel between New York and Washington. The three cars had been pulled away from the locomotive, but Amtrak was using only one track in the area as of mid-morning.

Team officials, though, said all Nationals personnel was fine.

"There weren't any major problems," said Nationals President Stan Kasten, who was not traveling with the team but had been briefed. "Just an inconvenience and a delay."

The chartered train consisted of a locomotive and three cars. About 50 passengers were on board including all the players, coaches, Manager Frank Robinson and support staff.

Mark Rogoff, a Nationals spokesman who was a member of the traveling party, said not all members of the team even felt a jolt when the train derailed.

"No one got tossed to the side or anything like that," Rogoff said.

Since arriving in the District, the Nats have traveled exclusively by chartered train to Philadelphia and New York. BARRY SVRLUGA (THE WASHINGTON POST)

Tigers' Verlander Will Skip Start to Prep for Playoffs

BASEBALL | The Detroit Tigers plan to skip Justin Verlander's start later this week to give the rookie right-hander a break before the playoffs.

"He's tired, so it gives him a little extra time," Detroit manager Jim Leyland said Tuesday. "I think Verlander is fine. It's a mental thing, more than anything."

Verlander has thrown 186 innings this season after throwing 130 last year — in the minors and two starts with the Tigers — and averaging about 112 in three seasons at Old Dominion. LARRY LAGE (AP)

Wizards' Jordan Has Lofty Goals

Coach thinks this team is capable of reaching the conference finals

WIZARDS | Gone are the days when the Washington Wizards coach says the goal for the season is simply to make the playoffs. Eddie Jordan is free to aim higher, with no fear of ridicule.

"Eastern Conference finals is the next step," Jordan said Tuesday.

And when will that happen?

"I don't know. I'd like to think it would be this year," Jordan said. "Certainly, in my mind, it's not a three-year plan. I want to get there this year. I've been there as a coach, as a player, and this team is becoming seasoned enough, becoming core enough, the chemistry is getting there, and that's the next step — not just making it to the second round. We did that two years ago."

Jordan spoke with reporters as the Wizards prepare to open training camp next week in Richmond, Va. There have been a few changes over the summer, but the team that goes through the drills at Virginia Commonwealth University will look similar to the one that lost three, one-point games to Cleveland in the first round of the NBA playoffs in the spring.

"We showed last year we can

Wizards coach Eddie Jordan talks with the local media on Tuesday morning.

compete with anybody," President of Basketball Operations Ernie Grunfeld said. "And we feel we're better this year."

Jordan and Grunfeld have transformed the Wizards from perennial doormats into a team that made the playoffs in back-to-back seasons for the first time since the 1980s. The roster has three solid stars in Gilbert Arenas, Antawn Jamison and Caron Butler — all in their prime.

That's good news and bad news. For two straight years, the Wizards have relied on a "Big Three" that evolved into the highest scoring trio in the league. Arenas, Jamison and Larry Hughes averaged 67.1 points two seasons ago, and Arenas (29.3), Jamison (20.5) and Butler (17.6) combined for 67.4 last season.

"We're always trying to get that fourth guy," Jordan said. "That's hard, man." JOSEPH WHITE (AP)

A SOD DAY IN COLUMBUS: Ohio State got a new playing surface on Tuesday, one-third of the way through the season. Workers laid 70,000 square feet of sod on the field, replacing the three-year-old grass. The new sod is from a turf farm in Ohio and will cost more than $75,000.

Hokies host Georgia Tech in what could be a battle for the division

COLLEGE FOOTBALL | For Georgia Tech and Virginia Tech, it's never too early to get a jump on your division rival.

The winner of Saturday night's game in Blacksburg, Va., between the 11th-ranked Hokies and the 24th-ranked Yellow Jackets will grab early command in the Coastal Division race to the Atlantic Coast Conference championship game.

"It's real important," Georgia Tech receiver Calvin Johnson said. "Everybody is expecting them to be in the ACC championship game. It would be good for us to go up there and knock them off. Then we would be in the driver's seat."

OUT IN FRONT: Last season, the Hokies slaughtered Georgia Tech 51-7. Virginia Tech is favored again this year and is looking to take the lead in the Coastal Division.

Virginia Tech (4-0, 2-0) and Georgia Tech (3-1, 1-0) are the only Coastal Division teams without losing ACC records. And while there are still two months left in the regular season, Georgia Tech coach Chan Gailey summed it up simply: "I'd much rather be in the lead," he said.

The Yellow Jackets have won three straight since opening with a 14-10 loss to Notre Dame. They beat Virginia 24-7 on Sept. 21 and moved into the top 25. But memories of last year's 51-7 loss at Virginia Tech still linger for the Yellow Jackets.

Virginia Tech won its first two conference games against North Carolina and Duke by a combined 71-10. The Hokies are tied for second in the nation in scoring defense, allowing only 5.75 points per game.

Nats' Johnson Will Rehab at Hospital in N.Y.

NATIONALS | Nationals first baseman Nick Johnson will transfer to a rehabilitation hospital in White Plains, N.Y., on Wednesday as he recuperates after breaking his right leg in a collision with a teammate last week.

Johnson will stay at that facility for a week to 10 days, then return to Washington and be examined by team doctor Ben Shaffer, before heading home to Sacramento, Calif., for offseason rehab work.

Johnson was injured Saturday in a gruesome collision with right fielder Austin Kearns during a 12-6 loss to the New York Mets. He was carted off the field and taken to a hospital, where a titanium rod was inserted into his fractured right femur during a two-hour operation. (AP)

A Brief Return to Normalcy

Challenges remain, but New Orleans rejoices in home opening win

FOOTBALL | The beignets at Cafe Du Monde tasted especially sweet. A French Market musician pounded out a peppy tune on his keyboard. Smiling — if somewhat weary — revelers strolled through the narrow streets of the French Quarter in their Reggie Bush jerseys and "Home Sweet Dome" T-shirts.

"What A Show!" the local newspaper blared across its front page.

Life in New Orleans had an air of normalcy Tuesday, the morning after the New Orleans Saints returned to the Superdome with a rousing, inspiring victory.

"In terms of the Saints' future, we've got a ways to go," acknowledged Doug Thornton, who runs the Superdome and oversees its $185 million renovation. "There's no doubt the public will support the team. But there's always that issue of the economic base,

A prognosticating fan holds up a sign during the Saints' win over the Falcons.

the corporate base."

The population is still less than half what it was before Hurricane Katrina. Who knows if enough deep-pocketed companies will return to buy up those pricey club seats and luxury boxes. And the Superdome is still a 31-year-old stadium — all spruced up, to be sure, but ancient in the what-new-stadium-have-you-built-for-me-lately NFL.

"We still face challenges in rebuilding our homes and businesses, but this game ... is proof of what we can accomplish if we work together," said Rita Benson LeBlanc, the team's executive vice president.

The support was certainly there Monday night. An earsplitting crowd of 70,000 packed the Superdome for the Saints' 23-3 victory over the Atlanta Falcons in a showdown of unbeaten NFC South rivals.

New Orleans (3-0) has first place all to itself and a reason to feel proud of just how far it's come since Katrina flooded the Big Easy nearly 13 months ago.

"New life has been breathed into this place," Thornton said. "Out of the destruction came opportunity. You never know how things will turn out. It's an ironic twist of fate."

TODAY'S TV LINEUP

NATIONALS (7 P.M. ON ESPN) The Nationals are actually on national TV, but it's not so everyone can see Pedro Astacio pitch. The playoff-contending Phillies are in town and Ryan Howard continues his run at a possible 60 homers.

ORIOLES (7 P.M. ON COMCAST) The mediocre Kris Benson gets the start for the Orioles against the Yankees. He faces

Chien-Ming Wang, one of baseball's strongest starters, in the second game of a three-game series.

SOCCER (2:30 P.M. ON ESPN2 AND 5 P.M. ON ESPN CLASSIC) ESPN continues to show UEFA Champions League games with PFC Levski Sofia playing Chelsea FC in Bulgaria and Werder Bremen facing FC Barcelona in Germany.

A Marvelous Old Idea

Judd Winick revives Captain Marvel for the 21st century

COMICS | Judd Winick has brought life to many of DC Comics' top characters, from Batman to Green Lantern, and now he can add another heavy hitter to his portfolio.

The writer, a cast member on MTV's "Real World San Francisco," is now bringing life to one of the earliest characters in the DC stable: Captain Marvel.

Winick

Marvel was once more popular than Superman, but that was in the '40s, when Marvel Jr. (Freddy Freeman) and Mary Marvel joined the Captain in the fight against evil.

Today, Captain Marvel is hardly one of DC's more popular characters. "Not even in the ballpark," Winick said.

Winick looks to change that with his re-launch of the entire Marvel family in the 12-part miniseries "The Trials of Shazam."

The series was spawned from events in DC's company-wide crossover, "Infinite Crisis," and jump-starts the characters, with

THEY SAY THE CLASSICS NEVER GO OUT OF STYLE: The 12-part "Trials of Shazam" continues the fight against evil with today's release of its second issue.

Captain Marvel taking over for the wizard Shazam.

Shazam picks young Billy Batson to be his champion. When Batson speaks the wizard's name, a bolt of light strikes him, turning him into Captain Marvel, imbued with the powers of Solomon, Hercules, Atlas, Zeus, Achilles and Mercury.

"Trials of Shazam," lavishly illustrated by Howard Porter, picks up with Shazam dead, Captain Marvel in his place and Freddy Freeman trying to prove himself worthy of the Captain Marvel title.

Captain Marvel, with his upright demeanor, silly friends (a talking tiger in a suit) and sillier enemies (an inchworm with goggles) is an anachronism among modern comics.

"I heard from fans that enjoyed the whimsical qualities of the character," Winick said. "That stuff doesn't necessarily work in the most contemporary sense for mainstream comics. We want him to be able to be in the same sort of comics as Batman, Superman and Green Arrow, and that means taking the character more seriously."

Winick wants to make the series accessible to longtime followers and first-time readers: "I make the assumption that most readers have not been following comics for 30 years." SCOTT ROSENBERG (EXPRESS)

MATES OF STATE

Mates — of and at State

The Mates, a married duo, play extraordinarily fresh, uplifting pop music with just an organ, a drum kit and lovely intertwined vocals. The group offers a hook-a-minute, purposefully shuns major labels and generally gives one hope for the future of indie rock.

→ The State Theatre, 220 North Washington St., Falls Church; with Starlight Mints, 9 p.m., $13; 703-237-0300. (East Falls Church)

'IF I WUZ YO GYRL'

Sisters in Cinema

Director Coquie Hughes will attend this screening of her film "If I Wuz Yo Gyrl" and discuss it afterwards.

"Gyrl" is a cinema verite drama exploring physical abuse in lesbian relationships.

→ National Museum of Women in the Arts, 1250 New York Ave. NW; 7 p.m., $5; 202-783-5000. (Metro Center)

YELLOWCARD

Trite and True

Yellowcard isn't another love-lorn emo band — it has a violinist. The interesting instrumental addition keeps the band from being utterly run-of-the-mill, but the ultra-familiar vocal stylings don't.

→ 9:30 Club, 815 V St. NW; with My Favorite Highway, Anberlin, Priestess, 7:30 p.m., $30, 703-218-6500. (U St.-Cardozo)

On her new CD, Jackson tells you how to do it and compliments your efforts.

20 Years Since 'Control'

Janet Jackson marks 20 years as an adult with a sexy new disc

MUSIC | The title of Janet Jackson's new CD, "20 Y.O." (Virgin), alludes to the 1986 release of "Control," her first "grown-up" album.

In one of the spoken interludes that lend the CD a casual, homey feel, Jackson says, "I want to keep it light. I want to have fun."

Here, "fun" means "sex." In the opening set of songs alone, Jackson promises to do it all, says you'll have to work for it, compliments you on a job well done, tells you how to do it and assumes the identity of a model.

But she also keeps it light in terms of artistic goals, especially compared with the ambition of albums such as "Rhythm Nation 1814" and "The Velvet Rope." This time her boyfriend, Jermaine Dupri, pairs her with Nelly on the ballad "Call on Me" and with Khia on the opening

"So Excited" and crafts an electro-funk setting for "This Body."

Dupri exits the album halfway through, leaving the final five songs almost entirely to the Jimmy Jam-Terry Lewis-Ms. Jackson production team. She seems hopelessly drawn to their old-school settings of strings, real pianos and quiet-storm drama.

It's an odd mix, but her plans to tour suggest that she wants to be back in the game. RICHARD CROMELIN (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Research Study Trying to Improve Depressive Symptoms Quickly

Several medications are effective for treating depression; however, they take weeks or months to achieve their full effects. NIMH is studying whether a drug can cause a rapid antidepressant effect in patients with bipolar or unipolar depression. The study also tries to see if it can sustain the results with another medication in certain patients. Understanding how this works may help us understand depression and design better antidepressants. NIMH is seeking people ages 18-65 with depression (unipolar or bipolar) who are:

- Free of other serious medical conditions
- Willing to participate in a minimum of a 12-day inpatient stay

Research medications provided free of charge.
Compensation and transportation reimbursement is provided.

Dressed to Kill

The Killers expand their music a bit for a sophomore album

VEGAS ACTS | Just how meteoric was the Killers' rise? About three months after they released their debut album, "Hot Fuss," in June 2004, Washington, D.C., promoter Seth Hurwitz booked the band at his 1,200-capacity 9:30 Club. Just eight months later, he booked them again — at the 16,000-plus-capacity Merriweather Post Pavilion in Columbia, Md.

It was par for the course for the Las Vegas band — singer Brandon Flowers, guitarist David Keuning, bassist Mark Stoermer and drummer Ronnie Vannucci — that went from blogosphere darlings to sales domination. "Hot Fuss" sold more than 3 million copies in the U.S..

On the eve of the Killers' follow-up album, "Sam's Town," due Oct. 3, the group is facing the uphill battle of having to prove itself all over again. The history of rock is littered with tales of bands that blew up big only to fizzle out.

The band has come a long way from being thrown out of Las Vegas clubs. The local band scene is straight-ahead rock, Flowers said. The Killers, especially with Flowers' androgynous dancing and their theatrical performances, were considered too glam.

NOT TO SOUND COCKY, BUT ... Singer Brandon Flowers' comment that the band's new CD is "one of the best albums in the past 20 years" has received backlash.

"We inherited a thirst for glitz from Las Vegas," Vannucci said. "It's impossible to shed."

"Sam's Town" has a bigger sound and more intricate arrangements, partially in homage to the group's idols Oasis and Queen. But it doesn't stray far from the sound introduced on "Hot Fuss," with its throbbing bass lines, jagged guitar blasts, vintage synth flourishes and

Flowers' theatrical phrasing. Tracks like "Read My Mind" and "Bones" are close relatives of the propulsive pop hit "Mr. Brightside."

Flowers said the members made the music they wanted to make. "I don't mean to sound cocky," he said. "We're just proud of this record. At the end of the day, it's all in the ear of the beholders." BRIAN GARRITY AND RAY WADDELL (BILLBOARD)

Aftermath On ABC's 'The Nine'

DEBUT | ABC's new series "The Nine," which premieres Oct. 4, examines the lives of nine strangers who were hostages in a siege at a bank.

It's clear from the drama's tense pilot that what transpired over those Tim Daly is one of "The Nine," characters taken hostage in a bank heist.

52 hours permanently altered the hostages' lives, forging unlikely ties among them.

The cast includes Tim Daly, who plays a police detective who winds up at the center of the robbery, Chi McBride as the shy branch manager, Scott Wolf as a hotshot surgeon and Owain Yeoman as one of the two bank robbers who hopes the crime will be successful enough to give him a brighter future.

Episode by episode, the drama will look at the core nine strangers and reveal another piece of what happened during the siege.

"The Nine" has received plenty of positive buzz from critics who have seen the pilot. GREG BRAXTON (LOS ANGELES TIMES)

Sydney Pollack turns his lens on a friend, architect Frank Gehry

THE CREATIVE PROCESS | Oscar-winning director Sydney Pollack ("Out of Africa") presents his first documentary, "Sketches of Frank Gehry," on "American Masters" (9 p.m., PBS). Pollack, who is an actor as well as a director, appears in the film and explains how he has been friends with Gehry for years and claims to know nothing about architecture. "That's why you'd be perfect [to make this film]," explains Gehry at the beginning of their conversations and collaboration.

Best known for his soaring Guggenheim Museum in Bilbao, Spain, Gehry has become famous for designing private homes, corporate headquarters and large institutional facilities, as well as for his use of unusual materials. The wavelike form of the Bilbao facility is covered in titanium.

We see Gehry developing ideas for new buildings in sketches and by literally playing with cardboard cutouts to see what he likes and what bothers him. He uses terms one would not associate with construction work. At one point, he looks at a proposed exterior wall and says, "Let's make it crankier." We also learn how essential computers are for Gehry. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

Energy

Silicon Valley could turn into a hub for solar power output

As demand for clean energy rises around the world, America's high-tech hub is looking to squeeze more money out of silicon.

Engineers and entrepreneurs in Silicon Valley are taking advantage of their expertise in computer chips to design and manufacture electricity-generating solar cells that they hope will be increasingly competitive with traditional energy sources such as coal and natural gas. Most solar cells and chips are made from the same raw material from which the valley gets its name.

"We're in the very early stages of a long build-out in solar technology," said Erik Straser, who heads the "cleantech" practice at the Menlo Park venture capital firm Mohr Davidow Ventures.

Despite technological advances since the first photovoltaic cells were invented 50 years ago, solar is still two to three times more expensive than fossil fuels in the U.S. and relies on government subsidies to compete.

But improving technology, falling costs, rising prices for fossil fuels, concerns about the electric grid's stability and worries about global warming are all raising interest in solar energy. The industry is expected to grow from $11 billion in 2005 to $51 billion in 2015, according to a projection by Clean Edge Inc., a market research firm focused on clean technology.

And that's why Silicon Valley is getting involved.

This month, Applied Materials Inc. announced plans to sell tools for producing solar cells. The company projects the market for such gear will triple to $3 billion over the next four years.

The company's equipment can be retooled for silicon solar wafers, while another of its technologies — for making flat-panel displays — can be applied to "thin film" solar cells sprayed onto glass and other flat surfaces.

SUNNY FORECAST: SunPower Corp. CEO Tom Werner said his company is set to earn $230 million due to its solar power work.

Guiding Light

Four years ago, Cypress founder T.J. Rodgers convinced his board to buy a majority stake in solar cell-maker SunPower Corp., founded by his former Stanford University classmate Richard Swanson. Rodgers argued that Cypress' manufacturing technology could be used to reduce costs and expand production of SunPower's cells.

Cypress' investment is paying off. SunPower raised $146 million when it went public last year, making it one of last year's most successful initial public offerings. Revenue has increased from about $10 million in 2004 to a projected $230 million in 2006, said SunPower CEO Tom Werner.

So many valley companies, venture capitalists and entrepreneurs are rushing into the burgeoning solar industry that it's inviting comparisons to the early expansion of the microchip industry more than two decades ago.

"If there's anywhere in the world that can push the envelope on solar, it might very well be Silicon Valley," said Clean Edge co-founder Ron Pernick. TERENCE CHEA (AP)

Return of the Kingfish

Political Icons

New movie and book resurrect Huey Long's mixed legacy in La.

For his first meeting with presidential candidate Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932, Huey P. Long dressed in his flamboyant Kingfish mode: plaid suit, purple shirt, pink necktie.

At lunch, Roosevelt's mother gazed down the table at the senator in the garish outfit. She whispered: "Who is that awful man?"

Seventy years after his assassination, one of America's most infamous politicians still triggers strong curiosity.

Sean Penn stars as a charismatic Southern politician, modeled after Long in the remake of "All the King's Men." A new biography reveals that, when he was killed, Long faced probable federal indictments on tax charges. And Louisiana's capital city is in the midst of an ongoing fixation with Long: two permanent museum exhibits, a freshly cleaned, life-sized statue on the Capitol lawn and a new downtown restaurant dubbed Kingfish — the nickname Long gave himself.

Penn says that Long's story remains relevant because Long tried to help the Louisiana poor endure the Great Depression. "The amount of hope he gave people then, and continues to today ... it's probably the most timely aspect of this story: his finding a way to make people feel recognized," Penn says.

Corruption and autocracy are part of Long's legacy. Suspicions are rife that Long-style graft continues to blossom in Louisiana, a state now receiving billions in federal relief money after last year's hurricanes.

"There is a crying need to resurrect Huey and to apply his story to today's Louisiana politics," says Richard D. White Jr., author of "Kingfish: The Reign of Huey P. Long," released earlier this year. "We're getting a huge amount of money, and I'm not very sanguine about our ability to handle it."

Long, who was elected governor at age 35 in 1928, controlled every aspect of state government: Contracts went to political allies; state workers who angered him were fired, along with their relatives.

Long boasted that one of his hires, a distant relative, "does his work better than anybody we got." Asked what the man did, Long replied: "Not a goddamn thing."

He was elected to the Senate in 1930, broke with Roosevelt and said he was running for president.

Roosevelt, in turn, launched probes into Long's taxes. Federal investigators decided to seek indictments, according to White. Long was fatally shot the same week by Carl Weiss, a doctor whose in-laws were in a dispute with Long.

Part of his legacy is the string of Louisiana rogues who followed. Earl Long, Huey's brother, had Mafia ties and was locked up in a mental institution while governor. Former Gov. Edwin Edwards was convicted of corruption charges in 2000 and remains in federal prison.

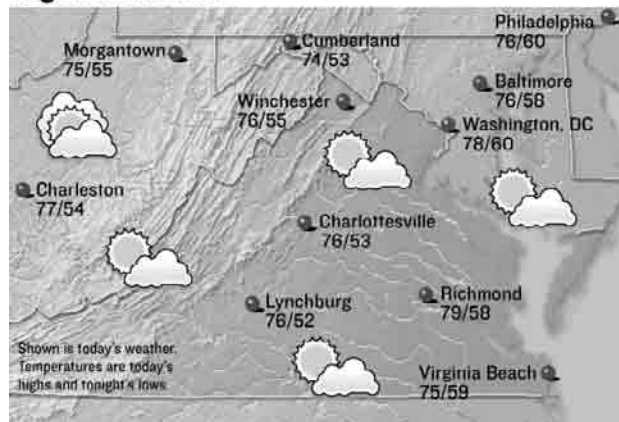

James Carville, the Louisiana-born Democratic strategist, an executive producer for "All the King's Men," says the state's politicians are no worse than others — just more entertaining.

"You have corruption everywhere. At least our crooked politicians had the good sense to amuse us," Carville said. DOUG SIMPSON (AP)

Milan Fashion Week kicks off with cold weather and hot style

Fashion followers got a wet welcome to Milan as chilly temperatures and persistent rainfall marked the opening day of the weeklong preview showings for spring-summer 2007.

But on the catwalk, dampened spirits were uplifted by the promise of hot and happy styles for next year's warm-weather seasons.

Giorgio Armani, for one, is in a very good mood.

"This is a very good moment in my life," the designer said after his much-applauded signature show, which harked back to his elegant look with a hint of androgyny that secured a place for Milan on the international fashion map some 30 years ago.

Armani is just back from a whirlwind tour in London last week during which he opened an Armani Casa housewares store and orchestrated a gala charity event to combat AIDS in Africa.

On hand to help with the cause were Armani fans such as Leonardo DiCaprio, Ashley Judd and Alicia Keys. The fashion highlight of his London trip was the presentation of his second line Emporio collection for next summer, which will not be shown in Milan.

Dubbed "easy chic," Monday's signature collection revisits some Armani favorites such as simple fluid trousers in ultrasoft fab-

"This is a very good moment in my life. ... Vintage is very popular these days, so I reinvented my own 'oldies but goodies.'"

GIORGIO ARMANI

ric paired with feminine jackets in Armani staple shades of beige and pink. A pert mannish fedora, demure silk shawl and flat footwear add androgynous mystery.

Nighttime at Armani is in elegant black, with sumptuous gowns caressing the body but never grabbing it. Demure silk berets or hats with brims worked like lace complete the romantic look.

"Vintage is very popular these days, so I reinvented my own 'oldies but goodies,'" the designer said.

Domenico Dolce and Stefano Gabbana jazzed up the summer catwalk with their latest funky club fashion for their second line D&G collection.

Models with creatures-of-the-night makeup and long hair dyed in shades of cherry pink, royal blue and acid green, held back by headbands in the same garish colors, marched down the catwalk in towering silver platform sandals or studded silver boots.

Outfits consisted of off-one-shoulder toga dresses or short frilly skirts and hot pants coupled with skimpy tops. These disco looks came with leggings in neon shades or black lace stockings. In lieu of an evening gown, the designers offered a slinky black lace leotard with a wide patent leather belt cinched at the waist.

During the six days of showings, which end Saturday, more than 60 Italian ready-to-wear designers including Prada, Gucci, Fendi, Ferre and Versace will present their offerings for next year's warmer weather. (AP)

Pretty Lies

Even though KENZO AMOUR ($65-$85, exclusively at Nordstrom) promises to be a "floral, woody scent," it's actually a combination of baby powder, Doublemint gum and licorice. Amour is good for those who want to wear smoky, heady, sexy perfumes to the office but have enough common sense to realize that "cubicle" and "club" are actually two different spaces. When You Tile, the World Tiles With You ARTISTIC TILE (artistictile.com) has developed a large-format leather tile that can be applied without mortar, grout or adhesive. For those unlucky enough to not live in boxes made of sheet metal, the tile is applied to a "rubber steel" layer that goes over the subfloor in your home. Available in six different patterns ranging from a simple mocha to a moo-y black and white cowhide, the tiles are available in 18" x 18" squares; you can also special-order custom sizes. K.P.K.

Following History's Tracks

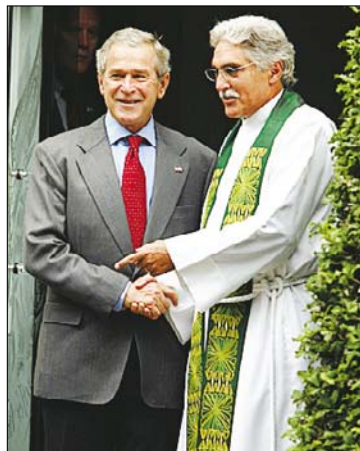

ARCHITECTURE | Although today's property values on and off MacArthur Boulevard might suggest otherwise, parts of the District's Palisades neighborhood — where today bungalows and summer cottages built 70 to 100 years ago run in the upper six figures — used to be a tucked-away working-class section of town. Why are those old bungalows there? It has something to do with the old No. 20 trolley line, which connected downtown and Georgetown to Glen Echo Park across the Maryland line via the bucolic, forested Cabin John route atop the Potomac bluffs.

While the Cabin John line, which spurred growth upriver from Georgetown, was abandoned in 1960, much of the right-of-way in the District remains and today runs through the backyards of plenty of Palisades bungalows as a recreational trail — although it's not very well-maintained throughout.

At the entrance to Palisades Park, one of those old homes has been irking some in the neighborhood. Jesse Baltimore is not a famous name, but the house he built in 1926 — now abandoned — is somewhat famous for being architecturally dull. It is a classic Sears Roebuck "Fullerton" kit house, the kind that, decades ago, you ordered out of a catalogue.

The abandoned house, now property of the District, has been threatened with demolition in recent years, but on a weekend hike we found it was still standing on its own. The remarkable thing about it is that while house after house in the Palisades has been expanded, renovated or torn down in favor of the more modern, upscale tastes of District living, the Baltimore

House remains much as it looked when it was originally built. MICHAEL GRASS (EXPRESS)

Real Estate Reality

CONDOS | During Monday's discussion on WAMU's "Kojo Nnamdi Show" about the real or perceived bursting/deflating of the local real estate bubble, Donna Evers of Evers & Co. Real Estate said that while the District is, for the most part, insulated from the negative effects of a market downturn in comparison to parts of "outer Fairfax," some of the most unfortunately positioned owners are those in the District with "one bedroom condos with no parking ... which we have a lot of." M.G.

Peace Mom

Antiwar activist CINDY SHEEHAN was online Monday at washingtonpost.com to discuss her new book, "Peace Mom: A Mother's Journey Through Heartache to Activism."

I will not pretend to understand the loss you felt with the death of your son. But nor do I understand why your grief has manifested itself through a hatred for this country that your son sought to protect. Why is your anger not directed at the terrorists who seek to destroy this nation's soldiers and civilians?

I don't believe that my son died protecting our country; I believe he died for lies. Casey was not killed by a terrorist; he was killed by an Iraqi citizen who wanted him out of the country. I love my country and I'm fighting to make my country better and I'm fighting so that no other mothers have to feel the pain that I'm feeling.

Since the chances are extremely good that the Iraq war will last through the end of Bush's term and carry into the term of the next president, will you continue similar protests and demand to meet with the new chief executive?

Yes, we will always take our protest to the seat of power. So wherever the next president is, we'll be there — if the occupation continues.

Please explain how you have somehow forgotten a meeting with President Bush and the photos, with you all smiles, that were taken with him? They were posted on a family Web site and conveniently removed. First of all, I don't forget that meeting and I don't forget the photos. They were removed because I didn't support the president and the meeting was not a good meeting and he didn't ask permission to kiss me.

Since you do not believe in fighting other than self-defense, what do you think would have been an appropriate response to 9/11?

Going after the people who perpetrated the crime — not innocent people in two countries that had nothing to do with it.

Horoscope

By Stella Wilder

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) You'll find that someone on the other team is actually quite intriguing and willing to share some important and valuable ideas with you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) Take all the time you need to complete the preliminary stages of an important new endeavor. You don't want to miss anything or make a mistake.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) Others are telling you to change your ways, but you'll feel you're on the right track and in line for some major rewards.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) The unlikely is most likely—thanks to your unwillingness to make any real sense of your own behavior. Unusual circumstances abound.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) Reassurance is something that has to come from within; no one else will be able to feel positive and capable. Keep your sense of self intact.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) The earlier you rise and get to work, the earlier you'll make a key decision that will demand a major adjustment on the part of family and friends.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Take care you're not sacrificing your own freedom in favor of someone else who hasn't earned your selfless dedication.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) It's more important to treat yourself well than it has been in the recent past. You'll benefit from something a little special.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You can't expect to get things right without making a few errors to begin with. You'll learn by doing at this time; you must experiment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Tell the truth—and insist that others do the same. You'll be in a position to call in a favor or two during evening hours.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You have a good deal to do, and perhaps a long distance to travel as well, so you'll want to get an early start. Discipline is key!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your perceptions may not be as accurate as you might want, but there is also something to be said for a subjective look at the world.

Metro Unveils First Escalator/Elevator Training Facility in Transit Industry

Metro has more escalators and elevators than any other transit provider in the world, and we're working hard to keep them in good working condition for our customers. Metro recently unveiled the transit industry's first elevator and escalator training lab in Landover, Md., where mechanics can learn how to better respond to escalator and elevator outages and make repairs. The state-of-the-art facility will give mechanics hands-on experience to teach them how to respond to elevator entrapments and repair nearly 900 units system wide.

The new elevator and escalator training lab, which opened earlier this summer, was built as a learning tool for students in Metro's Escalator and Elevator Apprenticeship Program and a continued training center for Metro's escalator and elevator mechanics. Eventually, the facility will be available to fire, police and emergency response departments from local jurisdictions to use for mock rescue exercises and training practices.

Metro currently has 588 escalators and 267 elevators. On any given day about 40 escalators and five elevators may be out of service for safety reasons, scheduled maintenance, inspection or rehabilitation.

To find out more about Metro's escalator and elevator service, visit MetroOpensDoors.com. From the homepage, click on "Accessibility" and then "Elevators and Escalators."

cable; high-speed Internet access; personal stereos and CD players; and your own Bosch washer and dryer. Weekly housekeeping service is included, as well as a state of the art fitness center with spa services, a café with daily club breakfast featuring Starbucks coffee, freshly baked pastries and fruit, business and conference facilities, and downtown parking directly under the building. Everything you need to get the day started in style or drift into a relaxing evening.

Residents of AKA by Korman Communities on H Street rave about the experience. "It was so nice to not be in a hotel room," said a recent resident. "Hotel rooms are simply small after a few days; my suite was very warm and inviting. It was nice to lie on a couch in another room and relax. Being able to pick up some groceries and make a nice dinner was refreshing!" Another guest confirmed, "Traveling is difficult but the AKA Korman Communities team, make it so much easier."

It's easy to love the location of AKA Korman Communities residential suites, on H Street. One resident calls the location "fabulous, right in the middle of everything." While another was pleased to say, "Everyone who AKA, a division of Korman Communities, recently introduced its new brand of residential suites to the sophisticated DC market. AKA, residential suites, have redefined and elevated the concept of the extended stay. Located at 1710 H Street, NW— just two blocks from the White House, the World Bank, and K Street—AKA, by Korman Communities is in the heart of DC's power district. It's an ideal location for downtown working and living, steps from world-class restaurants and fun after-hours hangouts, and just a short walk to Orange, Blue, and Red Line Metro stops.

Specializing in furnished apartment suites for residents staying 30 days or more, AKA by Korman Communities on H Street is the perfect option for people who need the convenience of downtown, maintenance-free living and desire the full living space of these one and two bedroom accommodations.

Each AKA suite at Korman Communities on H Street is a fully furnished apartment featuring one or two bedrooms one and one half or two baths, a living room, and a full kitchen. Chocolate brown hardwood floors, stainless steel appliances, limestone countertops and bathrooms, and exceptional interior design and style enrich the experience. On the penthouse level, high ceilings and rooftop patios create an atmosphere of elevated sophistication.

Residents' comfort is the highest priority at AKA by Korman Communities on H Street. Suites feature custom pillow top, triple sheeted beds, (the REM bed) ; DVD players and Sony Wega flat-screen televisions with digital has come to visit me [is] very impressed.”

At Korman Communities, style goes hand-in-hand with service. Korman Communities employees go the extra measure to make each resident feel right at home. Consider the experience of a recent resident working with a major consulting firm: “I had a very difficult Monday morning on my first day in a new position. I woke to a flat tire. I went up to the front desk and almost immediately a maintenance man helped me change the tire and followed me to a garage for a new tire.”

Through more than 80 years of managing high-end properties, Korman Communities has learned that little things count. A guest from outside the United States appreciates this commitment to friendly service: “Staying with Korman is always a pleasure. Coming from another country it is nice to have access to a large range of foreign TV channels. Most may not notice this, but when English is not your native language these are the touches that make you feel at home.”

AKA residential suites, on H Street is the world-class luxury living option Washington has been waiting for. Call today, 202.904.2500, or visit online at www.akahome.com to arrange a visit. See for yourself what so many residents have already experienced – AKA by Korman Communities on H Street is living at its best.
